Art Translation refers to the translation of art-related text or audio materials. Translation of this category requires exquisite writing skills because art is rather different in nature from other forms of human recreations. An art translator thus needs to do a lot better than to accurately translate and should try endowing the beauty of the original work into the translated work by any means and using any rhetoric techniques.

Why it matters?

Hundreds of thousands of pieces of the finest arts are being exhibited annually and they deserve to be appreciated by audience from all countries. A poor translation could result in the failure to fully convey the innate meaning of the original art work and thus make misrepresentations.
