About the project:

The client has some html files that need to be translated into Khmer/Cambodian. These html files should be used as email marketing. The client provides us with the files with some special instructions in word format. After the translations are done, the client need to layout the translations using Photoshop.

CCJK solution:

Once getting the files and instructions from the client, we select our professional native Khmer translators with marketing materials translation experience to deal with the translation and translate the files from scratch. After that, we let another Khmer translator proofread the translation to eliminate any mistakes and polish the words.

The client gets the translations and begins to layout the Khmer texts, they meet a problem using Photoshop. All of the Khmer fonts are crashed. They come back to us, and we suggest them using the most up to date Photoshop version and then this problem is well solved. However, there is another problem, it is the line breaks of Khmer texts. As they don't know Khmer, so we should point out these places that need to be updated in jpg file and tell them how to update after the draft layout finished.
